Shoes—

As infants we go without them.

Now we are young adults.

We need many shoes—

Comfortable shoes for living our daily lives-

Frivolous shoes for parties—

Special shoes for sports.

As we mature we need responsible shoes for the adult world.

Let us not be so pretentious that the shoe pinches

Nor be so small that it falls off.

dedication

DR. WALTER G. PATTERSON

To Dr. Patterson, for his constant effort in school improvement and his sincere interest in leading us to the paths of success, we dedicate this Advocate for 1960. During these four years, he has not only served as a capable principal, but also as an advisor to the constant needs of the students. He has worked faithfully to maintain the traditional standards of our school as well as to make a number of unique contributions toward expanding the program. To show our appreciation for his efforts and his faith in the students themselves, we take pride in dedicating our Advocate to Dr. Patterson.

IN MEMORIAM

As our feet have carried us over the road of life through our high school years, one of our fellow travellers has taken a different road and has left us forever. The joys and happinesses of our four years on the Hill have been marred by the untimely passing of Thomas Mahoney. However, more than the loss of a classmate, we have suffered the loss of a true friend. We shall never forget Tom's easy-going nature, his ready smile, and his sincere interest in his school and his classmates. The Thomas Mahoney Memorial Fund has presented a set of books to the High School Library in Tom's memory. The use of these books shall be a perpetual tribute to our departed friend.

Help from Miss Fessenden

. . . karin

Our exchange student Karin Walb from Krs. Alsfeld, Germany, is an enthusiastic traveller, a lover of books, classical music, and the theater, and enjoys swimming and dancing. In September Karin's American sister Linda Towne introduced her to her new classmates and to American customs. Karin's warmth and charm helped her to adjust quickly to Needham High School life. In thinking of Karin, we shall always remember her gay laughter, friendliness, and sincerity.

We are grateful to the Needham Exchange Club for sponsoring Karin's visit to the United States. We have been fortunate in having the opportunity to meet and know Karin and have gained much from her visit. Karin says of her stay in America: "This has been a wonderful experience for me to be in the United States of America for a year. I like very much the kindness of everybody and the cordial welcome to strangers."

"Karin, I'd like you to meet . . ."

. . ann

In remembering Ann Ritscher, we think of her frankness, gaiety, and good sense. We remember her enjoying Leaders' Club, field hockey, basketball, tennis, and Advocate. We recall, too, the happy day we learned that Ann was to be our exchange student to Germany. Now Ann has many delightful memories of Germany intermingled with her thoughts of Needham High School. She always will cherish the memory of her German parents, the Karl Fleischhuts of Kassel/ Hessen, Germany; her German sister Elisabeth; and Seppel, the family dog. Ann also will remember the many friends she made at the Melanchthon Schule in Treysa/Hessen. She can never forget the festive German Christmas, the fifteen school subjects, and the trip to the Rembrandt Art Gallery in Kassel, or more thrilling, the tours through France, Switzerland, and Rome for the Olympic Games. Exploring the castles on the Moselle River and being stranded in East Berlin are experiences that always will remain in her mind. After Ann has left Germany, her friends and family there will remember her as the American high school girl who was so thoughtful, so understanding, so interested in the German way of life.

... class of 1960

We, the Class of 1960, pause before walking down the Hill for the last time to review our four years at Needham High School. As Freshmen we enjoyed a class picnic at Whalom Park. During our second year of high school we presented our first dance, "Carousel." Our junior year brought the joy of our Junior Prom "Deep Purple." Tragedy marred the year, however, with the passing of one of our classmates, Tom Mahoney.

This year as Seniors we welcomed our exchange student Karin Walb, while Ann Ritscher represented our class in Germany. The first function of the year was our Senior Breakfast. The Senior Play The Heiress followed in December, and the spring brought our Senior Prom and commencement activities. Kevin Gottlieb, Paul Ryan, Paul Hunt, and Linda Littlefield organized these functions. In remembering the last four years, we also recall and thank our past officers and our advisors, Mrs. Perry, Mr. Walsh, Mr. Samar, and Mr. Griffin, who have assisted us in planning our activities. Most of all, however, each member of the Class of 1960 cherishes the friendships he has made during his four years at Needham High School.

Breaking an unwritten tradition, the Senior Class chose to present a serious play instead of the customary light comedy. The play The Heiress, written by Ruth and Augustus Goetz, under the direction of Mr. Donald Nickerson, was a challenge to the actors and actresses because of its mature level. The cast met this challenge with two memorable performances on December 11 and 12.

The audience will long remember the leading characters: Judy Pine as Catherine, the shy girl who turned into a hard woman; Mike Glover as Dr. Sloper, the unbending father; Duncan McNaughton as Morris Townsend, the handsome but mercenary suitor; and Petra Smith as the fluttery Mrs. Penniman. The minor characters complemented the roles of the leading characters.

"No, not consoled—loved, Aunt, but not consoled."

"In time the pain will pass, and then you will see better how wise and strong you have been."

acters: Linda Towne, Dr. Sloper's sharp-tongued sister; Peggy Jarrell, the kind Mrs. Montgomery; and Nancy Gordon and Rick Dow, the "happy couple living on $10,000 a year."

The cast, too, will remember the play; only it will remember the little things back stage: Gail Eaton's "whiskey sours;" Dick Greaves's congratulatory hugs; Paul Ryan's voice back-stage; Joan Webster's coffee; and, of course, the cast parties after the performances.

The final scene especially, moved the audience and cast: Catherine ascending the stairs, the cruel lines of her face illuminated by the candle light; the knocking at the door and Morris's plaintive cry of "Catherine! Catherine!"

... class of 1961

The Class of 1961 has fulfilled many of its ambitions in the past three years and is looking forward with determination and enthusiasm to an exciting senior year. Under the competent leadership of president David Svendsen, vice-president William Snow, secretary Martin Tracey, and treasurer Edward McGlaston, the class has made much progress in its third year at Needham High School. Guided by Mrs. Pryne, Mrs. Budd, Mr. Siegel, Mr. Kerr, and Mr. Twing, the class advisors, the class has been successful scholastically, athletically, and socially.

A large number of Juniors maintained honor roll grades throughout the year, thus indicating the high scholastic ability of the class. The junior class contributed a considerable number of athletes to the various sports. A large part of the varsity football team consisted of Juniors. Many members of the class participated in individual as well as other team sports. Pinky Mahan and Sally Lawson added their pep and enthusiasm to the varsity cheerleading squad. Two hundred and twenty couples attended the Junior Prom, "Fantasy in Gold." The attractive decorations and Freddy Guerra's band combined to make a delightful evening. The Class of 1961, thus encouraged by the successes of its junior year, hopes that its senior year will be equally rewarding.

There were four advisors who lived in a shoe, And had so many Sophomores they didn't know what to do;

The class gave its spirit and its athletes too, It helped Needham High, this class of '62. There were four class officers leading them on, Dale and Ginny, Sue and Tom.

The class was eager for another great year, So they faced their problems without a fear. As a result of their high scholastic work, Their difficult studies they never will shirk.

With Misters Goldberg, Hayes, and Protheroe, Along with Miss Kenney, whom we all know, The class will set their talents unfurled, For the time when they will be out in the world. Now, two years behind them and two years ahead, The class of '62 is the best, it is said!

... class of 1963

The Class of 1963 has the distinction of being the last class to attend Needham High School for its freshman year. The class began its first year at the High School by electing Jeff Rowe, president; Skip Scofield, vicepresident; Susan Hall, secretary; and Anne Dussault, treasurer. Under the leadership of these officers and with the guidance of Mrs. Dow, Mr. Herlihy, Mr. Allen, Mr. Kline, Mr. Mastrorillo, and Mr. Gerbino, the class enthusiastically entered into all phases of high school life. Many students attained honor grades thus indicating the scholastic ability of the class. The freshman athletic teams, supported by their cheerleaders and classmates, completed successful seasons. Encouraged by the successes of their first year of high school, the freshman class is looking forward with anticipation to their sophomore year.

The English Department continued to maintain its high scholastic standards during the past year. The staff of fifteen teachers under the direction of Mr. John Ferrett instructed the students in composition, grammar, and appreciation of literature. English I primarily initiated the students to the more mature work of high school. English II stressed organization and coherence in composition. The Juniors worked with analysis of composition in English III, and the Seniors in English IV did composition work with emphasis on form and style.

Accelerated courses were added in each grade for the first time to enable rapid learners to move forward in their development at a pace consistent with their abilities, ambitions, and interests. These courses emphasized extensive reading and the techniques of effective writing. Acceleration prepared the student for advance placement in college.

The course in Experimental Writing continued this year. In this workshop course the students were able to experiment with those forms of writing which interest them most.

Freshman English with Miss Burke

The Department offered a new course in Speech this year. In the beginning of the year emphasis was placed on the understanding of the voice mechanism and breath control. The pupils also studied sound and symbol. After the pupils had mastered these principles of voice and speech, they devoted the remainder of the year to vocal techniques and their practice in the several areas of the speech arts.

In addition to teaching these courses, the members of the English Department operated a bookstore and advised the staffs of the school publications. The profits from the store helped finance these publications. Selections written by members of the student body appeared in the new literary magazine compiled by the English Department.

. . . languages

The Language Department, headed by Miss Harrington, continued to modernize its teaching methods to remain abreast of today's educational standards. Some of the language teachers had to teach more than one language in order to accommodate the desires of the students. Since many liberal arts colleges require at least three years of a language, the School offered four years of Latin as well as three years of Spanish, French and German. The Department also offered for the first time this year a course in Russian which met twice a week after school.

The language instructors used records and tape recordings in the classroom to aid the students in understanding the spoken language. In addition, senior students devoted one study period a week to listening to records to improve their aural comprehension. These records helped prepare the French and Spanish students for a new College Board Listening Examination given in February.

The instructors also utilized films in the classroom. The films provided the student with a more general knowledge of the customs and the country of the people who speak the language.

As is the custom, the language classes again sang carols at Christmas time in their respective languages. Many Latin students joined the two-year old Needham Chapter of the Junior Classical League with Mr. Muir and Mrs. Perry as their advisors. This group organized and presented the third annual Roman Banquet in May. Dressed in homemade togas, the students participated in chariot and foot races. Freshmen playing the role of slaves served the "Latin" meal. Entertainment followed the dinner.

Classes in the Elementary and Junior High Schools showed great interest in languages during the past year. In order to provide for these students when they reach the High School, the Department is prepared to enlarge its curriculum and staff in the future.

... social studies

The Social Studies Department at Needham High School made several changes this year in its organization, staff, methods of teaching, curriculum, and general aims. Mr. Henry Hicks, the Director of Social Studies for the Needham public schools, headed the department. This year the Department welcomed four new teachers to its staff: Mrs. Ruth Budd, Mrs. Ruth van-Staveren, Mrs. Marcia Hellman, and Mr. Kenneth Holt.

One problem that faced the history teachers was that the use of one textbook in the classroom presented a limited interpretation of history to the student. In order to remedy this situation, a few United States History A classes used several sources rather than the usual single text. Although there was a constant demand for such books as Magruder, Paquin, and Bailey at the Library, the program proved to be successful.

Mr. Holt experimented with seating arrangements in the classroom to create an informal atmosphere and to encourage individual participation and discussions.

During the past year there was considerable contact between the Junior and Senior High Schools in order to evaluate and revise the social studies curriculum in the Needham schools. The high school program included Early European History, Modern European History, U. S. History, World History, Civics and Geography, and Economics and Sociology.

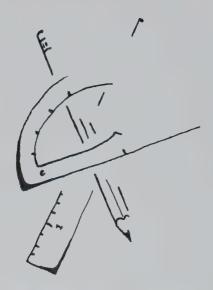

The Department plans to expand its program to include more intensive study in the fields of geography and anthropography than has been offered. An Advanced Placement Course in European History may begin in the near future. The Department also hopes to send groups of social studies students to the United Nations in New York. Through the use of modern techniques and improved facilities the Department plans to integrate the social studies programs throughout the Needham school system in order to provide the students with more opportunities to increase their knowledge.

. . mathematics

The students of Needham High School were fortunate in having a progressive Mathematics Department. Miss Fessenden headed the department of eleven teachers. During the past year more than three-fourths of the students in the school participated in the different available mathematics classes.

Accelerated courses in Algebra I and II, Geometry, and Math IV provided an opportunity for the advanced students to learn at a more rapid rate than usual. The teachers of these classes strove to maintain interest and to create a continual challenge for the students. The advanced courses enabled the students to complete five years of mathematics in four years of study. Needham High School was one of the eight schools participating in an experimental geometry course designed by the Yale Mass Study Group. Mr. Siegel taught this course to a group of selected Sophomores. The Mathematics Department also acquired a collection of supplementary reading books especially for the use of the students in the accelerated classes.

The students were not the only ones who were learning. Ten of our teachers participated in a course in modern Algebra taught by Professor Fitzgerald of Boston University. This in-service course met every Tuesday from 3:30 to 5:30 P.M. The efforts of the Mathematics Department assured the students of the latest knowledge and teaching methods.

General Science with Mr. Bongarzone

. . . science

With Mr. Bongarzone as Director the Science Department undertook the development of an advanced program of study. The Department offered a variety of courses and continued the APP Chemistry Course and the PSSC Physics Course.

All science courses included laboratory work as well as classroom lectures, a combination which provided a fuller understanding of the subject. Since laboratory work was such an important part of the courses, the Department remodeled the classrooms to equip them with laboratories and modern supplies.

The highlight of the year for the science students was the annual Science Fair in March. The wide variety of projects displayed the initiative and imagination of the students as well as indicating their particular interests.

To promote interest in sciences, the Department staff members made several trips to the Junior High School to lecture on the science courses at the High School. They also presented several assemblies at the High School to stimulate an interest in science.

... practical

arts

The Commercial Department at Needham High School continued to provide fine basic training in business subjects. Undoubtedly, the Personal Typing class was one of the most useful in the Department. Students, in both the College and Commercial Courses, acquired skills contributing to their personal and vocational needs. Personal business letters, term papers, typing from dictation, and direct use of the typewriter from written material helped the student to become efficient. The Advanced Typing class placed increased emphasis upon accurate and rapid typing.

The bookkeeping student learned the fundamentals of double-entry bookkeeping. The use of "practice sets" providing actual business forms and papers presented the complete bookkeeping cycle to the student.

The college preparatory student was able to take Beginning Shorthand, for the techniques of transcribing shorthand notes prove invaluable throughout the college years. The commercial student taking Advanced Shorthand increased his efficiency and understanding of office routine.

The Business Law Course stressed contracts, sales agreements, and fraud. Through this course the student became acquainted with the law and legal procedures.

The senior commercial student filed, made up payrolls, and learned to operate the machines of the modern business office. The Office Practice student gained a more realistic approach to office work through assisting faculty members with typing and clerical tasks.

The General Business class clarified the business transactions necessary for daily living. The subject covered banking, communication, insurance, and budgets. This course often influenced the student in the choice of his vocation. The Commercial Course fulfilled the needs of the individual student through the variety and thoroughness of its class.

Home and Family Living's gay party

... commercial subjects

Mrs. McDonald and Mrs. Kinchla taught Home Economics, a course for freshmen and sophomore girls. The Freshmen studied the fundamentals of nutrition as well as color co-ordination in clothing. The sophomore program was similar, dealing with balanced meals, proper table setting, and clothing evaluation. The Department also assisted with the various teas for the faculty and alumni.

The senior girls were enthusiastic about the Home and Family Living Course with Mrs. Kinchla. The class members discussed the problems of teen-agers, marriage and divorce, and alcohol. While studying child care, the classes gave a party to observe one child's reaction to another. Hard work and fun were a part of their organization of the enjoyable Senior Breakfast.

In Woodworking freshmen and sophomore boys learned to operate equipment skillfully. For three double periods each week the boys constructed end tables, cedar chests, and bookcases.

Mechanical Drawing is a required four year Shop Course under the direction of Mr. Pelletier. The curriculum for first year students was the introduction to the instruments dealing with orthographic projection and oblique views, and printing. Having grasped these essentials, the three upper classes worked on more advanced phases, such as sheet metal work, auxiliary views and cams, detailed and assembly drawings. Those students who did not take Shop could take Mechanical Drawing on Mondays and Tuesdays during organization periods.

Still another course offered by the Practical Arts Department was metal work. The boys met with Mr. Pelletier three periods a week to make gears, vices, sea clamps, and screw drivers.

Speed-reading films with Miss Tormey

... fine arts and reading

Development Reading, a one semester course required during the freshman year, may be taken a second time as an elective during the last three years of high school. The course, under the direction of Miss Tormey, emphasized speed in reading, vocabulary enrichment, and study skills in addition to reading comprehension. Developmental Reading contributes to the student's success in both high school and later work.

The Reading Course at Needham High School received national recognition for these contributions to student development. Articles concerning the course appeared in the 1959 winter issue of Journal of Developmental Reading, the Boston Traveler, and also the EDL Newsletter. The students and faculty of Needham High can well be proud of these honors.

Art and Music Appreciation, a five credit course open only to Seniors, consisted of instruction from both the Art and Music Departments. The Course aimed to establish a broad and practical understanding and appreciation of art and music in the student. Mr. Rourke and Mr. Nardi supplemented their instruction with active listening, observation, and research. The units of study in music included music in daily life, forms of music, music in the spiritual life of man, periods of music, acoustics, and the evolution of jazz. Art courses under the direction of Miss Brown included Art 1⁵, Art 1², Art II, Art III, Art IV, and Crafts I. These courses, ranging from two to five periods a week, provided a variety of backgrounds designed to meet the student's special interests and abilities.

"We have the compact car, but there's no shortcut to safety!"

... physical education and driver education

The physical education instructors offered a variety of activities throughout the year. Under the direction of Miss Amy Brown, Mrs. Freno, Mr. Maloney, and Mr. DeFazio, the students participated in team sports as well as individual activities. During the fall the senior girls worked with the trampoline for the first time. In the spring the boys presented their bi-annual gym meet, which demonstrated their proficiency in many areas of physical activity. Prior to the Christmas vacation the classes combined for a gay two weeks of square dances and cha-chas. The Needham Physical Education Department followed the program approved by the President's Council of Youth Fitness. Through physical education the instructors strove to build and maintain in the students deliberate habits of profitable physical activity.

One of the popular courses at Needham High School is Driver Education and Driver Training. The prime purpose of the course is to develop proper driving techniques and mental attitudes in the students. Through textbooks, films, and on-the-road driver training and observation, the students learn to be safe considerate drivers

The sizes of the Driver Education classes have increased so much during the last year that Mr. Muir, the Department Director, and the instructors Mr. Breunig, Mr. Cosgrove, and Mr. Gerbino found it more difficult to provide all the students with on-the-road training. In order to provide more time for road work, road tests were administered at the Registry Office instead of at the school as had been the custom in previous years.

The Department received two new cars this past year for its use. Feely Chevrolet Incorporated generously donated a standard shift Corvair and a 1960 Bel-Air automobile. Driver Education was particularly beneficial to the community in preparing the students to be safe, sane drivers.

The Student Council is a bridge between the student body and the administration. Decreasing the membership of the Student Council heightened its effectiveness this year. The School adopted a new method of electing members, whereby the three upper classes elected their representatives in June and the Freshmen in September. These members along with the class officers comprised the Student Council. The Council elected as their officers: Bruce Emerson, president; Steve Hazard, vice-president; Mary Lyons, secretary; and Donna d'Entremont, treasurer. Under the direction of the two advisors, Mrs. Budd and Mr. Skinner, the officers and the Council strove to establish a new relationship with the faculty. This year representatives from the Council and the faculty met together to discuss the clothing issue. The Council found that these meetings strengthened the bond between the student body and the faculty.

Other highlights of the year were the large roles the Student Council played in the town-wide Booster drive and the Exchange Club bean supper, the plans for a National Honor Society at Needham High School, and the Junior Town Meeting. Thus, the Student Council displayed the ability of youth to govern itself effectively and competently.

Three years ago the Hilltopper made its first appearance at Needham High School. Although it has become a more recognized part of the School, it is still a young and growing newspaper. The Hilltopper aimed to present a comprehensive view of school life. The staff grasped the essentials of journalism, especially through attending Boston Globe Press Conferences. They also gained experience by entering literary contests and discussing school newspapers with other schools.

The staff under the direction of the editor Nancy Marginot published six issues this year. The entire Hilltopper staff wishes to thank the Needham Times for its cooperation with the printing of the paper.

More than one hundred students played in the Needham High School Band this year. Under the able direction of Mr. Harris the Band presented a wide variety of pieces ranging from be-bop numbers with slightly improvised solos to serious classical selections. Because of its unique combination of fun, study, and co-operation, the Band enthusiastically contributed color and spirit to assemblies, games, and other local functions.

Pat Rae led the School's squad of ten majorettes through a successful season of exhibitions at games, concerts, and competitions. The time and practice put into the activity by the girls was evident in their precision twirling and drills.

As part of their schedule the Band and majorettes presented a Pops Concert to finance their annual exchange program. The trip was a just reward for the fine work the members did this year.

Every Friday organization period sounds of music issued forth from the auditorium, as Mr. Heald directed the Girls' Glee Club of one hundred and fifty-two voices. The highlight of the year was the Christmas assembly performance with the Needham Youth Orchestra. The two organizations combined to present "The Christ Child," written by Francis Nazzari especially for these groups.

The Boys' Glee Club, meeting every Friday, under the direction of Mr. Harris, has sung for the Needham Public School Association and also at assembly. In addition to singing, the group has contributed to Needham High School in another, rather unique, way. As one member explains: "Our Glee Club, along with developing our voices, has been instrumental in developing our characters as well. It has encouraged a spirit of teamwork, fair play, and perfection in each of its members. The fatherly leadership of Mr. Harris has given us a hardy push toward maturity. He has influenced us to play it squarely and not to accept second best in anything we do." With such spirit and cooperation the school can be proud of Mr. Harris' "Boys."

Thirty-six girls from the sophmore, junior, and senior classes comprised the Choraleers. Since it was a select organization, it was able to present many difficult vocal arrangements. Mr. Heald chose the girls according to their musical ability and interest. The girls were guests at the performance of the Don Cossack's Choral and Dancing group. During the year the Choraleers presented concerts for the Junior New Century Club, the State Mental Hospital in Westboro, and at Wellesley High School as part of a musical exchange program.

Working with a smaller number of boys than last year, Mr. DeFazio and Mr. Maloney were able to give the members of the Boys' Leaders Club more advanced instruction in the fundamentals of the physical education course. The Club, comprised of members of the sophomore, junior, and senior classes, met on Tuesdays during organization period. As a result of their special instruction, the boys acted as capable assistants in the regular gym classes. In addition to proctoring and assistant duties, the boys were instrumental in the planning and production of the successful bi-annual Boys' Gym Meet.

Miss Amy Brown and Mrs. Freno reorganized the Girls' Leaders Corps to form a more workable unit than it had been in previous years. In October each gym class selected four or five girls to serve as leaders throughout the year. The Corps of about one hundred members met each Monday organization period to learn and perfect the activities which would take place in the gym classes during the week. During this period the girls were grouped into four smaller corps, one for each class. They elected Ardelle Fullerton their captain and Gini Glode their sergeant.

In the classes, the girls, dressed in new white gym suits, assisted Miss Brown and Mrs. Freno by acting as proctors, taking attendance, and serving as responsible group leaders. The presence of the leaders helped the instructors plan more organized and varied programs.

The Boys' Apparatus Club gave individual and advanced instruction on the apparatus to its members that was not available during gym class. Since Freshmen were permitted to join the Club, the membership included approximately seventy students led by Mr. DeFazio and Mr. Maloney. The Club played an important part in the preparation of the Boys' Gym Meet.

Under the leadership of Miss Amy Brown, the Girls' Apparatus Club expanded their field of activities. The more talented girls entered the Interscholastic Gymnastic Championships and formed an exhibitions team which experimented with advanced stunts. The Club also participated in an exchange assembly program for the first time this year.

The Needham High School Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. John Nardi, was one of the growing organizations of our school. It met every Friday organization period and was open to anyone who played a musical instrument. During the past five years the orchestra has grown from a small string ensemble to a group comprised of thirty-two musicians. This year the orchestra played a wide selection of pieces including classical as well as modern music. It gave its first public concert and also performed at assembly.

In the fall the Radio Club elected its officers for the year. It chose Ned Hallein, president; Bill Wheaton, vice-president; and Peter Olendzenski, secretary-treasurer. Jon McAlear held the position of station trustee and worked with the Federal Communications Commission. Many members had their own stations and brought much of their own equipment to school.

The Club met with Mr. Herlihy every Monday during organization period. During the year the boys conducted code and theory classes, worked on transmitters, and contacted Radio Clubs in other schools.

... library club

From ten of eight to three thirty the Needham Senior High School Memorial Library was a center for research and reading. To cope with an increase in our school population and in the size of our book collection, the Library Club has grown to a service group of more than one hundred members interested in helping the students use the library efficiently. Assisting Mrs. Wagner with the organization of the Library Club were these officers: Gail Eaton, president; Marcia Stubbs, vice-president; and Marilyn Abbett, secretary. Mrs. Wagner and Mrs. Bates were able to devote more time to student reference questions because the Library Club members managed the clerical duties at the desk, the shelf organization, and the colorful display-case exhibits.

The members of the High School Camera Club photographed a great variety of subjects, concentrating upon community life, classroom scenes, sporting events, animals, and still life. Since the Club had its own darkroom and equipment, the students were able to develop and enlarge all of their own photographs. Leading the Club were president Richard Miller, vicepresident Joseph Sylva, laboratory chief Ted Loranz, secretary Nicholas Skinner, and treasurer Arleen Wessels. Because of their concentrated effort and the assistance of their advisor Miss Rose Brown, the students were notably successful in the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Contest in which they entered both black and white prints and transparent colored slides.

The Audio-Visual Club made arrangements for all films shown in the school. In March the club provided the teachers with order pamphlets from various companies from which they selected films for next year. The members notified the teachers when the films arrived and brought the same films to the classrooms at the designated times. The teachers appointed two students from each of their classes to run the projectors. Managing the club of over one hundred members were John Sivacek, president; Bruce Janek, vice-president; and Mr. Ashley Holt, faculty advisor.

... painting and ceramics clubs

The Ceramics and Painting Clubs met on Mondays and Tuesdays during organization period. Under the instruction of Miss Rose Brown, pupils created original work and mastered many of the techniques associated with the two phases of art.

The president of the Ceramics Club was Donna Hall with Alice Wise holding the office of secretary-treasurer. Because of the number of people desiring to belong to the club, membership was limited to those who are talented. Pupils created decorative and functional pieces.

Presiding over the Painting Club was Rebecca Lawrence with Linda Smith acting as secretary. The Club concentrated on still life and landscapes. The members of both clubs submitted paintings as well as clay pieces to various art contests and exhibits.

The Art Service Club is a specialized club designed to serve the school in matters of art and decoration. Its most important function was the planning and arranging of the display cases and bulletin boards of the school. The club members also did letter work on posters for various activities and distributed art supplies for school projects. One outstanding service was the gay Christmas decorations in the lunchroom and hallways. Through the efforts of Miss Rose Brown and the Art Service Club, the school had a pleasant

During the organization period on Fridays, Miss Amy Brown instructed the members of the Modern Dance Club in the fundamentals of ballet. Dressed in leotards, the girls arranged their own interpretive dances from various musical selections. The Club, primarily composed of underclassmen, helped the girls achieve graceful, natural movement.

J. Deane Somerville

It takes only seconds for accidents to occur that damage or destroy property. It takes only a few minutes to develop a complete insurance program that will give you proper coverages in adequate amounts. It might be well for you to spend a little time with us helping to see that in the event of a loss you will find yourself protected with insurance.

WHAT TIME

An Invitation to June Graduates

When you start working and receive your first salary, we invite you to come in and open a Savings Account.

Then, make it a habit to save something each pay day. Building a healthy bank balance will give you a wonderful feeling and prove that you have what it takes to get ahead financially.

We'll welcome you as a depositor.
